NO ONE TO BLAME FOR DEADLY FIRE IN SCHOOL

Heart-broken Mothers Complete Ghastly Task of Identifying Charred Bodies of Their Little Ones.

[By Evening Herald Leased Wire]

Peabody, Mass., Oct. 29.—The bodies of all the twenty-one girls of St. John's parochial school, who lost their lives yesterday in a fire which swept through the building before they had time to escape, were claimed by their parents today. Five bodies remained overnight in an undertaking establishment while relatives endeavored to identify them. Four of these had been identified noon and there remained the charred form of a little girl, burned beyond recognition.

When the four had been taken away, Mrs. John A. Hearn, mother of Agnes A. Hearn, 5 years, who was unaccounted for, went to the morgue and finally accepted the body as that of her child. It was placed in a casket and sent to her home.

While investigation has not fully established the origin of the fire, Acting Chief Neal of the state police, after an investigation today announced that he had found no one criminally responsible.

He said that while the building was badly constructed, it complied with the essential requirements of the law. The real fault in the building was the fact that all the stairs led toward the center of the building and not toward exits," said Chief Neal.

"I am convinced that the inspectors did their duty. The investigation so far as the state is concerned, I over-one of the many theories advanced today to explain the origin of the fire was that the sweepings kept in the basement storeroom where the blaze is believed to have started, may have contained match heads dropped on the floor by some of the boy pupils.

Although undoubtedly outnumbered and probably far outmatched in artillery, General P. Diaz Calles, in command of Agua Prieta, regards his position as impregnable.

The European war has been forgotten. The Tenth division on certain of the mountains overhead in France cannot be compared with the interest shown here in what is believed to be Villa's win-or-lose struggle.

Villa is reportedly reported to have twenty-eight field pieces, some as large as four-inch pieces, though these are believed to be hardly more than fifty per cent efficient. His army is estimated at from 6,000 to 12,000 men. The Carranza equipment, without the sixteen canons accompanying the delivered Regia Negra contingent, consists of the thousand American-made guns and thirty machine guns.

An attachment of fifteen Mexican soldiers, supposed to be a Villa force, detached from the Seventh and the Twentieth United States Infantry regiments which arrived last night, there are approximately 5,000 United States soldiers with four batteries of artillery, of sixteen guns. Two batteries arrived early today from Nogales and approximately 1,000 more men will arrive from Fort Huachuca tomorrow or Sunday.

Brigadier General Thomas P. Davis, of the Sixth Infantry brigade, assumed command today of the United States troops here. It is said Major General Frederick Funston will arrive soon to take command.

Seven American employees of the El Tigre Mining company, who left El Tigre, southwest of here, Monday, have not been heard from. Friends of the men express as worried but it is believed the men are being held by Villa troops around Frontiers to prevent information of Villa's movements reaching the outside.

The United States flagship San Diego touched here and sailed last night for San Blas and Tampico.

General Diaz Calles, in command of Agua Prieta, a region where little water is available, while Carranza forces under General Dieguez were reported to be working in behind him.

Moreover, the Carranza garrison at Agua Prieta numbers hardly more than 2,700 effective men and the reinforcements that General Calles expected to come from Piedras Negras over the American territory, with sixteen canons and 32 machine guns, cannot reach here for two or three days.

This was the word brought here last night by General Benjamin Hill of Carranza's army, who incidentally made it known that he does not intend to join the Carranza forces but that he will become one of the strongest non-combatants of the American side of the boundary.

Whether Villa is leading in person the army of invasion was not definitely known here, but his fate was generally believed to hinge on the imminent battle.

It will be probably will remain more or less important in the Mexican situation—at least in Sonora. If he loses, many Americans and Mexicans believe he will find the nearby boundary a convenient exit from Mexican affairs. A wife who says she is his wife awaits him with her baby in Los Angeles.

The relation of Douglas to the situation is shown by the attitude of citizens and visitors who crowded the hotels, boarding houses and dwellings.

There has been and there is still some apprehension as a result of experience here during previous battles at Agua Prieta, when stray bullets from the Mexican side killed perhaps five per-
